

Babies exposed to deadly chemicals contained in secondhand smoke are more likely to die from Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS) than babies that are not exposed.

